Zanzibar · coming soon

Working from anywhere makes choosing somewhere harder.

This guide is for remote workers thinking about buying property in Georgia, Cyprus or Zanzibar. It explains why each place attracts long-stay visitors, how to set clear goals before you buy, and what to check before you commit.

Amsi Spaces currently has verified information for Georgia and Cyprus. Zanzibar is covered as general information only.

Why nomads choose these destinations

Three very different places, each drawing remote workers for its own reasons. This chapter is general orientation. It isn't an offer to sell property in any of them.

CAUCASUS

Georgia

- Low cost of living compared with most Western European cities.
- Visa-friendly reputation. Citizens of many countries can stay for long periods without a visa.
- A growing remote-work community, centred on Tbilisi and Batumi.

MEDITERRANEAN

Cyprus

- An EU-adjacent lifestyle, with European services and time zones.
- Established expat infrastructure. English is widely spoken, and there are international schools and services.
- A Mediterranean climate with long, warm summers and mild winters.

EAST AFRICA

Zanzibar

COMING SOON

- A coastal lifestyle on the Indian Ocean.
- A lower cost of living than Western capitals.
- A growing community of long-stay visitors.

Buying as a base vs. buying as an investment

Decide which of these two goals is yours before you look at a single listing. They need different priorities.

GOAL A • A BASE

"I want to live here part of the year."

Priority: lifestyle fit.

- ✓ A neighbourhood you enjoy spending time in
- ✓ Reliable internet and a quiet room to work in
- ✓ Cafés, coworking spaces and community within reach
- ✓ Easy flights to the places you travel to most
- ✓ A simple way to lock up and leave for months

GOAL B • AN INVESTMENT

"I want this to appreciate or generate income."

Priority: rental demand and management logistics.

- ✓ Who rents in this area, and when in the year
- ✓ Local rules on short-term and long-term letting
- ✓ Who manages the property while you're away
- ✓ Maintenance, service charges and tax on rental income
- ✓ How easily you could sell later

A home you'd love to live in is rarely the easiest one to let, and the reverse is also true.

WARNING

Mixing the two goals often leads to a worse decision on both. Pick one to lead, and treat the other as a bonus.

Practical logistics for remote workers

Check these four things before you commit to any property. Each one is harder to fix after you've bought.

☐ Verify internet reliability

Ask which providers serve the building, and whether fibre is installed or only planned. Test the speed at the property during working hours. Find out how often power cuts happen and whether there's a backup.

☐ Research coworking and community

Look for coworking spaces, meetups and online groups near the property. Visit in the season you plan to live there. Some communities are busy for a few months and quiet for the rest of the year.

☐ Understand local banking

Check whether banks open accounts for foreign non-residents, which documents they ask for, and how you'll pay utilities and service charges while you're away.

☐ Know your tax residency

Your home country's tax rules don't disappear because you're abroad. Owning a home somewhere can also count as a tie to that country. Get advice in both places.

Georgia and Cyprus: what to know

These are the two markets where Amsi Spaces currently has verified information.

Georgia

LANDSCAPE

Mostly apartments, with many new developments in Tbilisi and Batumi. Foreigners can generally buy residential property, but agricultural land has restrictions.

TYPICAL BUYER

Remote workers and regional buyers looking for a city base or a seaside apartment.

CHECK

For off-plan purchases, check the developer's track record and completion dates. Check registration with the Public Registry.

Cyprus

LANDSCAPE

Apartments and villas along the coast around Limassol, Paphos and Larnaca, plus the capital, Nicosia.

TYPICAL BUYER

European and international buyers looking for a Mediterranean second home or a long-stay base.

CHECK

Check that title deeds are issued and clear. Non-EU buyers usually need government approval to purchase.

CYPRUS • NOTE

This guide covers the Republic of Cyprus. Property in the north of the island involves separate title and legal questions. Take independent legal advice before considering it.

Zanzibar: what to know

Remote workers come to Zanzibar for its coast, its pace of life and a growing community of long-stay visitors. Owning property there works differently from most places.

ITS OWN FRAMEWORK

Separate from the mainland

Zanzibar is part of Tanzania, but it has its own land laws and authorities. Rules that apply on mainland Tanzania may not apply here.

OWNERSHIP

Leasehold, not freehold

Land is generally held by the state. Foreign buyers usually hold long leases, often through government-approved projects, rather than owning outright.

COMPARED WITH THE GULF

A different model

Gulf markets such as Dubai have designated freehold zones for foreigners. Don't assume the same rights apply in Zanzibar.
